

Idaho Job Corps is a training program created to help income-eligible youth improve the quality of their lives through a focus on education and training, life preparation and career readiness.

Program Pathway Pillars & Phases

The three main pathway pillars of the program are a student's Education/Training, Life Preparation and Career Readiness pathways. Every student's pathway is individualized, and is unique to that student's life situation.

Education/Training

Idaho Job Corps students have the option to attain education and training that will help them reach their career goals. This includes attaining a high school diploma, GED, certification, degree or other credentials.

Life Preparation

Students participate in classes that help them become independent adults. These classes include topics such as personal finance, professionalism, goal setting and more.

Career Readiness

Students learn skills that help them prepare for a career including leadership, communication and time management. Students will have opportunities to participate in work-based learning, job shadowing, career fairs and regular interaction with employers.

Program Mission and Values

Idaho Job Corps' mission is to inspire and empower students toward a purposeful life. To support that belief and mission, we have program-wide expectations of the students to engage in physical fitness, academic and community connection activities weekly.

As a program, we value teamwork, engagement, organization, creativity, leadership and helping students and staff thrive. The program is designed to provide a holistic approach for students – one that supports intellectual, emotional and physical wellness and growth.

Student Progress

Students move through three phases as they prepare for employment — Development, Preparation and Transition.

Development

Students who are in the development phase are gaining foundational skills to enter a training program for employment. They are just beginning to understand and learn life skills that will allow them to be successful in the preparation phase and beyond. Students are often engaging in on-campus job shadowing opportunities during this phase.

Preparation

Students in the preparation phase are getting ready to or have just entered a program of study at the community college. This may include an associate degree program, career and technical education or a workforce development program. Students are often involved in off-campus job shadowing opportunities during this phase.

Transition

Students in the transition phase are working toward completion of their program of study. They will be transitioning out of the Idaho Job Corps program and into employment in the near future.
